

Suffixes Story

Exploring suffixes in the content

Identify and underline the words that end with -ing, -ed, -ly, -es, -ally, and -ize suffixes in the below-written story. One is done as an example.

Josh and Troy met in the park while playing with their friends. Troy was walking and Josh was playing football. Josh's ball accidentally hit Troy, and they started an argument. To show who is better, they decided to compete in a race. They went together to finalize the route and mutually agreed to race in Central Park on Sunday morning. On Saturday evening, the clouds rolled smoothly across the sky and soon it started pouring. There was no hope they could race soon.

It kept raining for 4 days. After it stopped, both came out of their houses and saw the flooded park. Branches and leaves were swinging in the air. The sight was a total disaster. After a few minutes, they saw young children approaching them holding brooms and bags. The children asked if they could help clean the garden with them. Both happily agreed and started cleaning. One held the garbage bag, and the other picked up the broken branches and leaves. Together they cleaned the park. By doing this, they showed grace and courtesy towards each other and the neighborhood and built a lifelong relationship.

Answers

Josh and Troy met in the park while playing with their friends. Troy was walking and Josh was playing football. Josh's ball accidentally hit Troy, and they started an argument. To show who is better, they decided to compete in a race. They went together to finalize the route and mutually agreed to race in Central Park on Sunday morning. On Saturday evening, the clouds rolled smoothly across the sky and soon it started pouring. There was no hope they could race soon.

It kept raining for 4 days. After it stopped, both came out of their houses and saw the flooded park. Branches and leaves were swinging in the air. The sight was a total disaster. After a few minutes, they saw young children approaching them holding brooms and bags. The children asked if they could help clean the garden with them. Both happily agreed and started cleaning. One held the garbage bag, and the other picked up the broken branches and leaves. Together they cleaned the park. By doing this, they showed grace and courtesy towards each other and the neighborhood and built a lifelong relationship.